Brief description of the activities the scholar performed or participated in:

I conducted research on the impact of globalization on local cultures, focusing on key points such as the definition and overview of globalization, positive effects of globalization on local cultures, challenges posed by globalization to cultural identity, the role of technology in cultural exchange, and case studies of globalization affecting specific cultures. Additionally, I explored strategies for preserving local cultures amidst globalization, future trends in the relationship between globalization and culture, the importance of cultural tourism in promoting local heritage, and the role of education in understanding globalization. After completing the research task, I prepared a PowerPoint presentation summarizing the findings, compiled 12 tips to enhance social media strategies for promoting local cultures in a globalized world, and created a list of 10 potential workshop titles for the Women's Wellness Center (WWC) department.

Written feedback about the scholar's performance:

Alaa showcases strong analytical thinking and research skills, especially in examining the complex relationship between globalization and local cultures. Her ability to present both the positive and challenging aspects of globalization reflects her critical thinking. Additionally, Alaa shows creativity and strategic thinking in exploring ways to preserve cultural identity, which highlights her adaptability and growing problem-solving skills.
